vulnerable members without navigating the courtroom alone. The FOC office, a branch of the Jackson County Circuit Court, administers three core services: fee waivers for low-income parties, mediator-led dispute resolution, and supervised visitation or guardianship support for children. These programs are designed to keep cases out of the formal docket, saving time for both families and the court system. For example, a single parent who cannot afford attorney fees may qualify for a fee waiver, while a mediation session can resolve a custody disagreement in a single. Several practical barriers keep residents from taking advantage of FOC services: Awareness gap: Community members often assume "court" means a courtroom, not realizing the FOC office sits beside the same building and offers free consultations. Paperwork overload: The income verification forms required for fee waivers can seem daunting, especially for those juggling multiple jobs.
