Bruce Witkin Matt Sorum Zak Starkey Andreas Kisser # Hollywood Vampires - Heroes live @ O2 Arena, London 12th August 2026 When you hear the name Johnny Depp, you probably think of Captain Jack Sparrow or a courtroom drama. But for the last decade, the actor has been deeply immersed in a different world - fronting a genuine rock supergroup called Hollywood Vampires. Formed in 2015, the band is a living tribute to the "greatest drinking club in history," a nod to a legendary celebrity drinking society of the same name founded by Alice Cooper in the 1970s. For fans curious about this musical chapter of Depp's life, here's a look at what. The Hollywood Vampires aren't a fleeting vanity project. The core trio - Johnny Depp (guitars, vocals), Alice Cooper (vocals), and legendary guitarist Joe Perry of Aerosmith - formed the band with a shared reverence for the classic rock and blues artists who paved their way. Their name and initial mission were explicitly about honoring friends and rock icons like Keith Moon, John Bonham, and Harry Nilsson. This gives the group a foundational seriousness; it's a band built on mutual respect and musical pedigree, not. Their musical approach is direct and powerful. The debut album, simply titled Hollywood Vampires, was almost entirely composed of covers, featuring songs by bands like Led Zeppelin, The Who, and Badfinger. This wasn't karaoke; it was reanimation. They tackled these classics with the muscle of seasoned rockers, adding their own swagger while preserving the soul of the originals. Their follow-up, Rise, shifted to more original material, proving the trio could write compelling rock songs that stood alongside their. It's easy to pigeonhole Depp as the "actor in a band," but his role is integral. A lifelong guitarist who has played on albums by artists like Marilyn Manson and Jeff Beck, Depp provides rhythm guitar, backing vocals, and occasional lead vocals. His playing style is gritty and blues-inflected, serving the song rather than seeking the spotlight. In interviews, he consistently positions himself as a devoted fan and sideman, with Cooper and Perry as the band's traditional frontmen and leaders. This humility about his. The true test of the Hollywood Vampires has been their live shows. They deliver a thunderous, no-frills rock performance that connects with fans who crave musicianship over spectacle. Touring internationally, they've shown that the project has legs beyond the initial press cycle. For Depp, the band represents a pure musical outlet, a place to connect with his heroes and peers on stage without the demands of film production. It's a testament to the enduring pull of rock 'n' roll camaraderie. Start with the first album if you love classic rock covers and want to hear familiar songs with a heavy, live-in-studio feel.
