clubs now report attendance that rivals their most popular exercise classes. Think of a crossword as a city map. Each white square is a street block, and intersecting words are crossroads where you can re-orient yourself. By visualizing the puzzle this way, seniors can locate familiar landmarks—common short words like AGE, SUN, or CAR—and use them as anchors to solve longer, unfamiliar entries. Just as a traveler consults a city map to find the fastest route, a crossword enthusiast can scan the grid for high-frequency words and build outward, reducing the feeling of overwhelm. Morning Warm-Up: Spend five minutes reviewing the clue list, highlighting any that contain numbers or familiar themes (e.g., U.S. holidays). Grid Scan: Locate the highlighted clues on the puzzle and circle the corresponding squares.
