Rabbi Michel Lomner sings the last hallelukah to the tune of hallelujah by Leanard Cohen. Yavneh Academy, a pluralistic Jewish day school in the United States, integrates spiritual development into every facet of its curriculum, offering families a clear pathway to nurture both academic achievement and religious identity. By combining structured classroom study with daily prayer, community-oriented projects, and values-based mentorship, the school aims to produce students who are confident in their faith and equipped for lifelong learning. Core subjects such as mathematics, science, and language arts are taught alongside Hebrew language instruction and Jewish studies. Rather than treating religious content as a separate "religion class," Yavneh embeds Torah concepts into discussions of ethics, history, and literature. For example, a unit on the American civil rights movement often includes a parallel analysis of the prophetic calls for justice found in the Hebrew Scriptures. This interdisciplinary approach helps students see their spiritual heritage. From the moment the bell rings, students participate in a short morning meditation followed by a brief minyan (prayer service). These rituals are intentionally
