If you receive $300 or more from a single client, that client must send you a 1099-NEC, and they will report it to the IRS. This includes earnings from platforms like Upwork, Fiverr, or even a local plumbing service that pays you cash. Business owners who pay independent workers or vendors for services such as marketing consultants, graphic designers, or legal advisors need to issue 1099-NEC forms promptly. Failure to do so can result in penalties of up to $210 per form. For 15% off your order go to and use code: TECHLAB15 It's been a fun ride! And it seems to be over. and ensure compliance. Starting this tax year, the threshold for reporting payments made to non-employees (the classic 1099-NEC form) has dropped from $600 to $300. That means any single recipient who receives at least $300 in a year for services rendered—whether via a freelance platform, rideshare app, or direct client—must receive a copy of 1099-NEC, and the payer must file the form with the IRS. All 1099 series—NEC, MISC, and others—now must be filed electronically if the filer is submitting 250 or more forms. The IRS is tightening the deadlines, pushing the filing window for paper copies back to the end of February and for electronic submissions to the end of March. This change applies to both individuals and corporations. For taxpayers who previously filed 1099-NEC and 1099-MISC together, the IRS is encouraging the use of the consolidated 1099-NEC/MISC format. This format reduces duplication and helps payers keep track of all non-employee and miscellaneous income in one place.
