Tax Refund: An error that led to an excess tax liability, such as a miscalculated deduction. The IRS requires the claim to be filed within specific windows—generally within two years of the date the tax was paid or three years from the filing deadline—otherwise the request may be barred. Before touching the form, assemble the original tax return, payment receipts, and any correspondence that details the alleged error. For penalty abatement, include statements that demonstrate reasonable cause (e.g., medical records, natural disaster notices, or documented software failures).
